RESEARCH FINDINGS ON THE EFFECTS OF
THE 2008-2009 ECONOMIC CRISIS ON
THE WELL-BEING OF THE UK POPULATION

The 2008-2009 economic crisis had a significant impact on the well-being of the UK population. The crisis led to a sharp decline in household income, a rise in unemployment, and a decrease in consumer confidence. These factors contributed to a decline in the overall quality of life for many households. The crisis also led to a increase in poverty and inequality, with the poorest households experiencing the largest declines in income. The crisis also led to a decline in public services, as governments cut spending in order to reduce budget deficits. This led to a decline in the quality of education, healthcare, and other public services. The crisis also led to a decline in mental health, with a rise in depression and anxiety disorders. The crisis also led to a decline in social cohesion, with a rise in social isolation and a decline in community spirit. The crisis also led to a decline in trust in government and other institutions, with a rise in cynicism and a decline in faith in authority. The crisis also led to a decline in environmental quality, with a rise in air pollution and a decline in water quality. The crisis also led to a decline in the overall state of the UK, with a rise in crime and a decline in the quality of life for many households.
